Bhupinder Nahal: Hi, this is such a great presentation. I have a newly formed PFAC so this information is so helpful. Unfortunately I need to hop off in 10 minutes to get onto another call. Are you able to share these slides with us?

Marie Abraham: The recording will be available on our website with any handouts within a few days of this webinar.

Lindsay Hartman: Thank you!

Bev Johnson: There will be a recording posted by tomorrow. And this new resource Deborah is describing will be available on the website.

Cecilia Hernandez: This is great. Thank you.

Linda Starnes: Thanks so much — this is such a timely resource! Linda Starnes, FL DOH Title V

Angela Miney: Hi Linda Starnes😊
Cassaundra Kemp: Very grateful for this resource!

Bev Johnson: Great to have the interest and commitment of Title V. You are so important in each of the states.

Teresa Prouty: Looking forward to it!

Irma Dadic: Fantastic! Thanks so much for all of this work and for sharing it with us

Patrice Mayo: Patrice Mayo, Tennessee Hospital Association

Marie Abraham: You can find that resource on our website at: https://www.ipfcc.org/bestpractices/patient-and-family-advisory-programs/study-pfac-childrens-hospitals.html

Bev Johnson: Patrice, welcome. I hope everyone on the call will share information with their statewide hospital association. And in Canada, with your health authorities.

Linda Starnes: Hi back to you @Angela Miney of the FL UF-PPC and our FL Family Leaders Network (yes, I’m organization name dropping ;))!

Patrice Mayo: Absolutely!

Angela Miney: I will be sharing this widely to family leaders and organizations in Florida, and to the Maternal and Child Health Bureau Pediatric Pulmonary Centers nationally

Edward (Ed) Schor: I'm unable to find the "Key Learnings": document on the IPFCC website.

Linda Starnes: Thank you @Bev Johnson … I already have two upcoming meetings to share this newest information / resource through our Title V work here, as well as with the University of Miami’s UCEDD/LEND advisory committee of which I’m a part.

Marie Abraham: Here is the direct link to the Key Learnings: https://www.ipfcc.org/resources/IPFCC_Key_Learnings.pdf

Bev Johnson: Hi, Ed. SO glad you are here. Your leadership was key to launching this important work.

Heidi Shannon: Can we get some examples of training/ continuing education that folks are doing for their PFAs beyond orientation. Thanks!

Pam Dardess: Heidi, our panelists may have some info to share, and we will also be sure to look at questions after the webinar and provide additional info
Tricia Campero: Are there resources where PFAC's around the country can communicate with each other to share recruitment ideas and other ideas so support their hospital?

Irma Dadic: Thanks Pam! The info for the additional training/continuing edu would be helpful. I would also appreciate any information you have gathered of successful mentoring programs

Becky George: Could you give examples of best practices to engage staff in suggesting community members to be involved in PFAC's. and ideas about great recruiting tools?

Pam Dardess: Thanks, Irma — we’ll be sure to capture that request!

Marie Abraham: IPFCC hosts the PFCC.Connect online learning community (free) where people share resources, post questions, and communicate with each other. If you are not a member, you can join here: https://pfcc.connect.ipfcc.org/home

Irma Dadic: Thank you Pam!

Tricia Campero: Thank you!

Sandra Holdsworth: What tools do you use to measure impact?

Linda Starnes: One of the diversity areas for membership, and for involvement in QI initiative within a health care systems, is the desire for representation of those with specific health condition, i.e. HIV/AIDS, mental health conditions, etc. However, due to stigma and reluctance to disclose, it is difficult to recruit and include those members. Any suggestion as to how to build trust and comfort on inviting and including Patient/Family Advisors with specific conditions such as these?

Laurie Hines: love the idea of PFAs being links to, highway for, educators to staff...thus creating new advocates/advisors.

Linda Starnes: @Tricia Campero — Totally agree with @Marie Abraham on PFCCpartners, and their connected PFAnetwork.

Sandra Holdsworth: When working with underserved & underrepresented individuals, I think instead of looking to individuals to represent that you partner with the community groups representing them.

Richard Sider: Staff champions are clearly important to the process of gaining and improving advisor participation in committees, redesign teams, and quality improvement teams. What are the best ways that PFAC organizations have found to find and develop those champions?

Irma Dadic: Love what you shared Donna! What advice would you share about hardwiring the partnership with teams outside of PFACs?
Pam Dardess: Sandra, that is a really important point — developing those relationships is critical.

Desiree Collins Bradley: It is very important to be intentional when recruiting diverse populations. The messenger and the message is a key component.

From Desiree Collins Bradley: Very good points. Trusted messengers.

Pam Dardess: Thanks for noting this, Desiree - it’s important to make sure that we’re being intentional and respectful in this process.

Rhonda Cady: A knowledge translation team that I lead, which includes parent advisors, had the opportunity to assess our team’s level of family engagement using the FESAT. FESAT is Family Engagement in Systems Assessment Tool. I was eye-opening and extremely useful. Giving a shout-out to this tool as not sure this work will touch on tools for assessment piece:)

Lori Albers: Excellent insight.

Mark Newsom: I think you are looking for the different lenses that health care is seen through. What does it look like for the different populations.

Rhonda Cady: FESAT developed by Family Voices. I'll post the link next.

Ian Todd: What specific techniques have worked for children's hospitals to recruit new mothers who have limited time?

Rhonda Cady: https://familyvoices.org/familyengagementtoolkit/

Irma Dadic: To recruit diverse advisors - We evaluated each PFAC and set goals for each. We then partnered with our Community and Gov relations department to connect us with leaders in our community that could help us expand our reach.

Richard Sider: What are the best ways that PFAC organizations have found to educate and encourage staff members on the advantages of having PFAC/advisor participation in all teams addressing patient-facing activities and changes?

Bev Johnson: Ian, it has been always been challenging to recruit mothers and fathers who have a new baby. I think our new comfort in using technology and virtual meetings may work better for this population. Much more time efficient. And you can participate with a babe in arms! Have you offered the opportunity to participate virtually... even a hybrid model with some in-person time.

Marie Abraham: Community members have also told us that getting out into the community is an important approach to connecting and recruiting. With COVID-19, many community health events are offered online or as safe in-person events. Reach out to the organizations leading those.

Teresa Prouty: I would love to hear how onboarding barriers are being adjusted to make it easier for our more hesitant voices to be heard.

Marie Abraham: IPFCC hosts the PFCC.Connect online learning community (free) where people share resources, post questions, and communicate with each other. If you are not a member, you can join here: https://pfcc.connect.ipfcc.org/home

Edward (Ed) Schor: PFACs leaders can work with their hospital's development offices.
Marie Abraham: Thank you for the great session.

Pat O'Hanlon: Thank you so much! Great webinar!!

Donna Rubenstein: Thanks for sharing, excellent presentation and discussion. Encouraging to hear how far we have come -and where we are going!

Irma Dadic: Great session! Thank you so much for sharing this information with all of us.

Tricia Campero: This was a wonderful session and I learned a lot. Looking forward to talking to our PFAC about this meeting and connecting with other PFACs around the country. Thank you!

Joanne Ganton: Thank you for sharing this new resource - I can't wait to share it with our engagement teams!

Lori Albers: Thank you all. This was a great session.

Karen Anderson: thank you for the wonderful talk.

Alisa Powell: Great job, thanks!

Richard Sider: Excellent presentation and insights. Thank you.

Leslie Louie: Thank you!

Linda Sample: Thank you so much for this webinar and sharing so many great resources!
